"No, and we're dealing with an anonymous letter about an anonymous person and an anonymous friend," Kavanaugh said. "It's ridiculous. Total Twilight Zone. And no, I've never done anything like that."

Kavanaugh then was asked about, and categorically denied, an allegation made by a Rhode Island man -- whose name was redacted from the transcript -- raised in a call to Rhode Island Democratic Sen. Sheldon Whitehouse's office "concerning a rape on a boat in August of 1985."

“Do everyone who is going crazy about what I had said I have recanted because I have made a mistake and apologize for such mistake,” the Catalan page tweeted on the evening of September 26, 2018 after news broke that Kavanaugh was asked about an assault allegation from a Twitter user whose details match the Jeffrey Catalan account, including the verbatim wording of tweets in Senate Judiciary Committee interview transcripts. Here’s the recanting tweet:

In Roche's appearance on "Anderson Cooper 360," he said he was "shocked" when he heard Kavanaugh say "boofing" meant flatulence and "Devil's Triangle" was a drinking game, "because those words were commonly used and they were references to sexual activities. ... I heard them talking about it regularly. I think that contributed to some of my feelings about the fact that these guys treated women in a way that I didn't like."

"We were in a room together -- our beds were 10 feet apart for a couple of months," Roche told Cooper.

The Honorable Dianne Feinstein, Ranking Member
Committee on the Judiciary
United States Senate
331 Hart Senate Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Chairman Grassley and Ranking Member Feinstein:

We are classmates of Brett Kavanaugh's from Georgetown Prep, a Jesuit high school in the Washington, D.C. area.

We write to clear up any misunderstanding about the phrase "Devil's Triangle" that appeared in our 1983 high school yearbook, including on our individual yearbook pages. That phrase was the subject of questioning at Judge Kavanaugh's confirmation hearing last week and has since been discussed in the media.

"Devil's Triangle" was a drinking game we came up with in high school. It was a variation on the game "Quarters." When we played "Devil's Triangle," four people sat at a table. On the table, three small glasses of beer were arranged next to one another to form a triangle. Each of the four participants took turns being the "shooter." The shooter attempted to bounce a quarter into one of the glasses. If the quarter landed in one of the glasses, the person at the table sitting nearest that glass had to drink the beer.

We do not remember the exact origin of the name, but none of us used the phrase "Devil's Triangle" in our yearbook to refer to any kind of sexual activity. To us, it was just a game with glasses in the shape of a triangle. If the phrase "Devil's Triangle" had any sexual meaning in the early 1980s, we did not know it.

Respectfully,

DeLancey Davis
